Historical Origins of Poverty Report Instructions

Choose a country from the list of developing nations (below) for your case study.

Research the history, geography, culture, and economics of your country to explain why it is a developing nation. Why is there hunger and poverty? Who are the wealthy versus who are the poor? Why did the country fall behind in development? How did the poor get poor? How is poverty perpetuated? Is your country being exploited for resources (or was it in the past) by other world powers? Was it a colony or under imperialist control? Is its economy dependent on developed countries? Is it engaging in modernization? What are the geographical, economic, social and political features (past and present) of your country that affect its poverty? Consider: climate, quality of land, ability to grow food, ecological destruction, exports, imports, GNP, education, technology, religion, population pressures, women’s status, political and economic democracy, history of conquest, domination of one racial, cultural, or economic group over another, etc. What are the ethical implications of poverty and hunger in your country?

Write a 2-3 page, typewritten paper, 1-1.5 spaced with two full pages of text on this subject using at least three scholarly references (with proper citation) in your research in addition to at least one other reference.

Your report must include at least one ethical argument. Address whether an issue is or is not morally acceptable, giving a reasoned argument based on an ethical theory or principle.

FSHN students will include their paper in their portfolio

Grading Rubric

A: Well researched, informative, thoughtful presentation of the reasons for poverty and hunger in your country and excellent analysis of the historical, social, ethical, political and economic implications of it. Report integrates and interrelates your topic with other concepts and ideas covered in class relating to poverty, ethics, agriculture, women’s status, etc. Scholarly references are used.

B: Informative presentation of the reasons for poverty and hunger in your country, and good analysis of the historical, social, ethical, political and economic implications of it. Does more than a minimal job of integrating and interrelating your topic with other concepts and ideas covered in class relating to poverty, ethics, agriculture, women’s status, possible policy changes, etc. Scholarly references are used.

C: Fair presentation of the reasons for poverty and hunger in your country, and analysis of the historical, social, ethical, political, and economic implications of it. Integrates the topic with other concepts and ideas covered in class relating to poverty, ethics, agriculture, women’s status and policy changes. Scholarly references are used.
