Sociology Club Movie Night

The movie Lone Star will be featured at Sociology Club Movie Night, Thursday, Nov. 9, at 7 p.m. in Coover Hall 2245.

Discussion afterwards will be led by a panel of faculty members: Terry Besser, Brian Monahan, and Steve Sapp.

Dave Schweingruber is hosting.
The U.S. racial system has focused on the white-nonwhite dichotomy

- The one drop rule: one drop of black blood (i.e., any percentage of ancestry) makes someone black
- Until 1967, many states had laws against miscegenation (marriage or sexual relations between a man & a woman of different races)

People and groups move from one racial category to another

- Because of the one-drop rule, many blacks throughout U.S. history have looked white enough to “pass” as white; this has resulted in a large percentage of whites with black ancestry
- New immigrant groups, e.g., Irish, Slavs, have been successful in becoming white

Census categories

- Races: American Indian or Alaska Native, Asian, Black or African American, Native Hawaiian or Other Pacific Islander, White, Some other race
