Departmental Competency Areas

The Doctorate of Philosophy degree with a major in Education and a specialization of Curriculum and Instructional Technology must demonstrate competence in the following areas:

1. a working knowledge of the field, including research, its prominent individuals and their contributions, and its issues and trends.
2. an ability to synthesize knowledge and demonstrate skills associated with the field.
3. an ability to write stylistically and intellectually at the level of sophistication commensurate with the dissertation.
4. an ability to function effectively in face to face dialogue.
5. an ability to create a viable solution to problems in the field.